Deepika Padukone's Pregnancy Glow Captivates Fans as Ranveer Singh's Sweet Gesture Wins Hearts in Mumbai

Mumbai, 9 June: Bollywood power couple Deepika Padukone and Ranveer Singh once again grabbed public attention during a recent outing in Mumbai. Deepika's visible baby bump became the center of admiration as fans and photographers gathered to catch a glimpse of the actress, who looked radiant in a comfortable yet stylish ensemble.

As anticipation grows around their journey into parenthood, Deepika and Ranveer continue to receive an outpouring of love and best wishes from fans across the country.

She followed the advice, but it led her towards commercial films such as Rascals and Dhamaal.

Filmmaker Karan Johar has taken a strong stand against a section of podcasters. He believes these shows thrive on controversy and allow guests to make offensive comments about people in the film industry. In his note, the director also expressed disappointment with astrologers and psychics who sensationalise their appearances by making disturbing predictions about celebrities.

On Saturday, Karan Johar took to Instagram stories to call out what he described as a problematic "sub-culture" in the podcast space. Without taking names, he accused certain platforms of deliberately inviting irrelevant guests in order to attract attention through their controversial statements.

He wrote, "While I have utmost respect for credible and respectable members of the media! One sub-culture of podcasters (basically chat shows with new age terminology) who have emerged from the woodworks... woods that no GPS can locate... they invite guests who have nothing to lose. Who haven't been invited since World War 2, and those guests spew venom and say the most disrespectful things about hard-working and legendary members of our fraternity!"

Taking his criticism further, Karan slammed shows that feature astrologers and psychics making frightening predictions about actors. He remarked, "This needs to stop! Also, psychics and astrologers giving awful and scary revelations, even about people's impending death, is both insensitive and disgusting! Free speech? Yes. Clickbait for followers? No!!"Karan Johar's comments come at a time when podcasts have become increasingly influential in shaping public narratives about Bollywood.

Amid Peddi Controversy, Kangana Ranaut Urges Women to Raise Their Voice Against Uncomfortable Scenes

Mumbai, 9 June: Actor and politician Kangana Ranaut has weighed in on the ongoing debate surrounding the film Peddi, emphasizing the importance of consent and communication in the entertainment industry. Speaking amid the controversy, Kangana said that women should feel empowered to speak up whenever a scene makes them uncomfortable or crosses personal boundaries.Highlighting the need for a safe and respectful work environment, she stressed that actors have the right to express concerns and seek clarity about scenes before filming.

Kangana noted that open dialogue between performers, directors, and production teams is essential to maintaining professionalism on set.Her remarks have reignited discussions about workplace ethics, consent, and the responsibilities of filmmakers in ensuring that actors feel secure while performing challenging roles. The comments have drawn attention across the industry, with many viewing them as part of a broader conversation about safety and accountability in cinema.The update comes after Dipika had earlier informed fans about developments in her health, which had sparked concern online. Shoaib's statement aims to put rumours to rest and provide clarity on her ongoing medical care.

Despite the hardships, Tannishtha Chatterjee expressed gratitude for the love she has received. "But in the darkest moments, I discovered an extraordinary kind of love, the kind that shows up, holds space, and never lets you feel alone. I found it in my amazing friends and my family, whose unwavering support, brought, genuine smiles to my face, even on the hardest days," she said.

She concluded her post with a heartfelt reflection. "In a world racing towards AI and robots, it's the irreplaceable compassion of real, passionate humans that is saving me. It is their empathy, their messages, their presence – their humanity – that is bringing life back. Cheers to female friendships, the sisterhood that showed up for me with fierce love, deep empathy, and unstoppable strength.

Janhvi Kapoor has addressed the cultural background of her character in the upcoming film Param Sundari, amid criticism over her accent and portrayal of a Malayali woman. Speaking to ET Digital, Janhvi Kapoor explained that her character in the romantic comedy is of mixed heritage.

"Finally, here was a story that had all of that, but also gave me the chance to go towards my roots. Of course, I'm not a Malayali, and neither was my mother, but my character is actually half-Tamilian and half-Malayali. I've always been very interested in that terrain and that culture, and I'm also a huge fan of Malayalam cinema. So yeah, I think it was just a very fun, interesting story, and I'm so happy and grateful that I could be a part of it," she said.

While Janhvi did not directly address the backlash, her remarks come at a time when she has been facing online trolling for her accent and wardrobe in the film. Malayalam singer Pavithra Menon has been one of the critics. She shared a video in which she broke down Janhvi's performance and expressed disappointment over how the Malayali identity was represented.The discussion took another turn when Pavithra revealed that her video was removed from Instagram following a copyright strike. Sharing a screenshot of the notice, she said the takedown was initiated by a "third party." In her caption, she added: "Happy Independence Day to everyone who has a voice."Directed by Tushar Jalota, Param Sundari also stars Sidharth Malhotra and is produced by Dinesh Vijan under the Maddock Films banner. The film will release on August 29.

Janhvi Kapoor has mastered the art of turning film promotions into a fashion runway. Currently busy promoting her upcoming movie Param Sundari with co-star Sidharth Malhotra, the actress has been serving one standout look after another. For her latest outing, Janhvi chose a strappy, flowy midi dress that instantly turned heads.

The outfit featured a corset-inspired bodice with slim spaghetti straps and lace-up detailing at the bust. The skirt flared into a soft silhouette that swayed beautifully with every movement. The print itself was a highlight, showcasing bold tangerine florals, pink splashes, hints of green, and pastel touches, all set against a creamy base.

It was the kind of print that feels like summer bottled into fabric.Janhvi kept her accessories understated, allowing the summer dress to command full attention. She paired the look with white heels that elongated her frame while maintaining the minimalist aesthetic.

Her makeup followed the same less-is-more philosophy. She opted for fresh, glowing skin with a dewy finish, softly flushed cheeks, and nude glossy lips. Her eyes were accentuated with subtle definition, while her lashes added just enough drama without overpowering the look.

Her hair was styled in soft waves that framed her face naturally. The effortless styling elevated the dress while keeping the overall look light and breezy. Janhvi shared glimpses of this look on her Instagram handle with the caption, "My face when he says #SunMereYaarVe", cheekily tying it to the music of Param Sundari.
